Studio for Co-operation C.I.C undertakes the research and development of new kinds of creative events that use technology. These events are designed to welcome anyone who wants to take part.

During the financial year the company's activities have benefited the community in a number of ways, for example:

- * Continuing to work with Copleston Maintaining Health Partnership, Bradley TRA, Creation Trust on the Aylesbury estate in South London and a number of other organisations to explore socially valuable uses of text messaging.
- * Developing an asset based approach to creating public events that celebrate people and organisations doing great things in places in England's north.
- * Investing time in learning programming in order to develop new services in-house.
- * Undertaking a two year contract to develop mobile messaging for adult social care with a local authority.

The company's stakeholders fall into two groups, one group are partner organisations who wish to fund the development of innovative new uses of technology; the second group is small third sector and voluntary organisations and members of the public who take part in creative events or want to make use of technology for socially valuable outcomes.

We are in regular contact with partner organisations to update them on progress and outcomes, to incorporate their feedback into ongoing work, and to understand opportunities for future collaboration. At the same time we evaluate our events by talking to participants, and use this feedback both to improve the experience for future participants and to report back to partner organisations about new opportunities to use technology to enable wider participation in creative and socially valuable activities.
