Figure 1 shows the results of the regression analysis. The regression equation is  $y = 0.0001x + 0.0001$ , where  $y$  is the number of days of absence and  $x$  is the number of days of work. The regression line is a straight line with a positive slope, indicating that the number of days of absence increases linearly with the number of days of work. The correlation coefficient is 0.99, indicating a very strong positive correlation between the two variables.
